University, Miss., Dec. 15, 1903.

To Gov. A. H. Longino, President of the Board of Trustees of the University of Mississippi, for Transmission to the Legislature of the State:

By direction and authority of the Board of Trustees of the University of Mississippi, we have the honor to make herewith the financial report to the Legislature as required to be made, biennially, in accordance with Section 4454 of the Annotated Code. Disbursements from the general fund, which include interest on seminary funds, and special appropriations for current expenses, are made by warrants on the local treasurer in Oxford, which warrants are numbered in order as listed in this report. Disbursements from appropriations for special purposes are made by warrants on the State Treasurer, who is ex-officio Treasurer of the University. These warrants are numbered in different series for the several appropriations as indicated. All expenditures are supported by itemized vouchers which have been examined and passed by the Finance Committee of the Board of Trustees.

With these explanations, and by reference to the Code requirement, the financial statement will be readily understood.

In presenting this financial report it seems proper that a general statement should be made regarding the working of the University during the period from the date of the last report, December, 1901, to the present time. This period of two years has been marked by earnest work and increased prosperity in the institution. In the regular session of 1901-2, closing June 4, 1902, there were enrolled in the University classes two hundred fifty-seven students. Twenty-six of these were post-graduate students, fifty-three were law students, twenty-seven were engineering students, and the remainder were in the academic classes. Of the number thus enrolled fifty completed the course required for their degrees and graduated at the end of the session.

In the session of 1902-3, two hundred forty-seven students were enrolled, twenty-five of these being post-graduate students, forty-three law students, and the remainder in the engineering and academic departments. At the end of the session, June 2, 1903, forty-seven completed the required courses and received their degrees.

The enrollment for the current session, 1903-4, at the time of this writing, is two hundred sixty-three, and is largely in excess of the enrollment at corresponding date for each of the last three sessions, and promises to reach a total of three hundred for the session.

During each of the two sessions, 1901-2 and 1902-3, covered by this report, twenty per cent of the students enrolled completed courses leading to graduation. This means an average residence of from two to four years for these students. It is doubtful if any other American institution of similar grade and thoroughness can show a similar proportion of its students remaining to the completion of their courses and taking degrees. This fact is evidence of the faithfulness of the student body and of the high appreciation of the advantages and opportunities afforded in the University of Mississippi. In accomplishing these results the University has made no abatement of its requirements in scholarship. It is one of the charter members, and one of the twelve colleges or universities which are members, of the Southern Association of Colleges and Preparatory Schools. The fact that no preparatory students are enrolled in the University, and that only those are admitted as freshmen whose advancement is sufficient to enable them to graduate in four years, and the additional fact that its requirements for admission into the freshman class are nearly or quite one year in advance of those in force in other colleges in the State, add importance to the statement made in regard to the large proportion of graduates.

The distinctive policy of the University in connection with the educational system of the State, to which policy it has adhered consistently for ten years, is to leave secondary or preparatory education to be done in the high schools of the State, to use every means in its power to encourage and develop these high schools, and to concentrate all its energies in the effort to afford to the youth of Mississippi the highest and best training in its collegiate and professional work. The University has always stood for high ideals in scholarship. That this has been wise policy is evidenced by the fact that few institutions can show among their alumni a larger proportion of those who have achieved eminent distinction in later life.

The authorities of the University, in differentiating its work from that properly belonging to high schools and preparatory schools, are following the policy outlined by Mr. Jefferson many years ago for education in Virginia, the policy which has been wonderfully successful in educational development in the Northwestern States, and the policy which has been approved by the Associations of Colleges and Preparatory Schools throughout the country. In carrying out this policy the University has united in close co-ordination and co-operation with the best public schools and other high schools in the State. It has aided these schools by friendly visitation and conference in the adoption of such courses of instruction as will prepare their students for admission to the best colleges. It encourages students to remain in these local schools until they are fully prepared for college. That this policy is best for the pupils, best for the local high schools and its community, and best for the general interest of education in the State is the judgment of the authorities of the University, based not only upon well grounded opinion, but upon former experience in connection with preparatory classes in the University. This experience showed that at the time when the University maintained a preparatory department which contained more than two hundred fifty students, there was no certain indication that the efficiency of college work was helped, or that the number of graduates was materially increased. In this connection, it should be remembered that statistical evidence such as was presented in the memorial presented to the Legislature two years ago and such as is accessible now, clearly shows that no other Southern State has enrolled in the college classes of its State university in courses such as the University of Mississippi offers, in proportion to its white population, so large number of students as has the University of Mississippi during the last five years. Mississippi ranks pre-eminent among the other Southern States in the efficiency and success of its general educational policy, and it is certain that this pre-eminence of Mississippi in its educational work is due largely to such encouragement and development of its high schools as that which the University endeavors to give.

From the beginning of its work up to 1892 the University offered scarcely any other work than that belonging to the usual literary course, the school of law and the preparatory department. Since the abolition of the preparatory department in 1893, continued effort has been made to place the institution upon a higher and broader plane of influence by increasing its thoroughness and enlarging the scope of its work. In order to accomplish this, and to enable the institution fully to meet its obligations to the people of the State, enlargement in every direction was necessary. Ten years ago its buildings were dilapidated and its resources cramped, and the scope of its work confined to its law and literary departments. From the aid received by a land grant made by Congress and from the wise liberality of the Legislature and the generosity shown by private citizens, its buildings have nearly all been renovated, and large additions have been made to them, the annual resources of the University have been increased, and the scope of its work has been correspondingly enlarged. The law school is maintained with an efficiency second to that of no other law school in the Southern country. Courses in civil, electrical and mining engineering have been organized and equipped with such facilities as have given this work a satisfactory beginning. The school of pedagogy has been enlarged into a department of education which is doing the much needed work in the training of teachers for public and other schools. A department of medicine has been organized and has begun its work in a manner altogether gratifying. This department of medicine undertakes to cover now only the usual first half of the usual four years' course in medicine, and it is so organized as to lay the very best foundation for success in the study and practice of this profession.

For the present prosperity and the favorable outlook for the future too much praise cannot be given to the wise liberality of the State government in 1902. The appropriations then made have been expended by the Board of Trustees after the most careful consideration.

With the special appropriation for insurance policies aggregating about $120,000.00 have been carried on the property of the University. The appropriation for scientific equipment has been expended cautiously, in accordance with the needs of the scientific departments heretofore existing and the development of the engineering and other newer scientific departments, and the fitting up of the new laboratories. With the appropriation of $4000.00 for extension of steam heating, all the buildings in which such heating is desirable and practicable are now provided with such heating facilities.

The appropriation of $2300.00 for the construction of a spur track to the power house has been used for that purpose, and by the use of this track more than $1500.00 has already been saved to the University in the hauling of materials.

The appropriation of $2400.00 for wells and connections has been used to secure a new eight-inch well, and to extend and increase the efficiency of the water supply.

The appropriation of $4000.00 for repairs has been used for this purpose, but has not been sufficient to keep in order the buildings here belonging to the State.

In expending the funds appropriated "for building for classes and general uses," and the appropriation made "for dormitories needed," the Board of Trustees employed the architect of the new Capitol, Mr. Theo. C. Link, to make a careful examination of the grounds and the buildings previously constructed at the University and to make suggestions as to the best use of the funds available. After a careful study of the conditions and needs the University, it was deemed best to construct one dormitory to cost $20,000.00 and to construct the building for classes and general uses as an annex to the lyceum, the main public building of the University. Plans for these were drawn by Mr. Theo. C. Link. After due advertisement the contract for both buildings was awarded to J. F. Barnes & Company, on November 27, 1902, the contract calling for completion of the work in June, 1903. The dormitory was in condition to be occupied at the opening of the session in September, 1903, and is in use. The annex to the lyceum is planned for offices, lecture rooms, laboratories, Y. M. C. A. hall, and other public uses. The great need for this building is shown by the fact that all of the space was apportioned for immediate use as soon as completed.

The appropriation for current expenses in 1902 and 1903 has been expended with the general fund. The enlarged scope of the work of the University, including the new departments of civil, electrical and mining engineering, the department of education, and the department of medicine, calls for the continuance of at least this measure of support for current expenses, in addition to the interest due on the seminary funds.

We have the honor to be, very respectfully,

J. A. ORR, Chairman,

R. H. THOMPSON,

W. B. WALKER,

W. A. BELK,

J. W. T. FALKNER,

Executive Committee of the Board of Trustees.
